ABOUT GRAFF

The GRAFF journey began in early 70's when a young man named Ziggy Kulig moved from Europe to the US with a big dream to make a difference in the industry by bringing creation, innovation, and perfection and changing impression by pathbreaking industry norms. Driven by a strong entrepreneurial spirit and a passion for European design and American ingenuity, he opened the first operations in 1982. In order to meet the increasing demands of the market, Ziggy Kulig acquired Valvex, a European valve and faucet manufacturer founded in 1922. Utilizing old-world craftsmanship and new-age technology, all products are produced with the utmost precision and care.

Being a vertically-integrated manufacturer, each product is being engineered, manufactured, and inspected in-house, giving GRAFF total control of every step in the manufacturing process. GRAFF's artisans rely on expertise honed from years of experience in turning exciting raw ideas into tangible goods.

GRAFF takes pride in its sustainable practices. From implementing ISO 14001 and meeting the rigorous Environmental Management Systems (EMS) standards, to offering products that respect strict conservation standards, GRAFF is committed to turning their passion for the environment into action.
